The evolution of the CLGTI can be traced back to 1939 when experimental courses were organised by the African Educational Department. In 1951, it was transformed into "African Local Government School" and has ever since undergone several transformations, reflecting the evolving landscape of local governance in Zambia.

Other facilities on the premises include:

- Conference rooms
- Accommodations
- Cafeteria
- Computer lap & library
- Lounge bar & hair salon

ABOUT US

The Chalimbana Local Government Training Institute (CLGTI) is an institution under the Ministry of Local Government and Rural Development, with a primary mandate to build capacity in all local authorities in Zambia. The Institute aims to deliver relevant client-oriented human resource and institutional capacity building services which would contribute to decentralised service delivery; promoting transparent local governance and democratic public participation at community level.
